MONTPELIER

Seven Waterbury Liquor Cases Were Disposed of in City Court.

Seven cases were disposed of in Montpelier city court Monday afternoon which resulted in the state getting $600 in fines, considerable in costs and still more money to come if it is found that the liquor condemned can be sold at a fair value to some state institution. The cases in which fines were imposed were L. Savoini and Mrs. Louis Bianchi of Waterbury. Each was fined $300 and costs, and each given a sentence of from eight to ten months in the house of correction, the sentence being suspended upon the payment of the fine and costs. They also had to pay condemnation proceedings in liquor cases. These cases are the result of a raid that was performed in Waterbury the night before Christmas, in which a quantity of liquor was found.

Well towards $1,000 worth of liquor was condemned Monday afternoon. The first case was that against Mrs. Bianchi, who pleaded guilty to illegal selling of liquor. The liquor found at her house and condemned included two barrels of cider, two barrels of wine, two jugs of wine, one jug of grappa, one bottle of whiskey, four bottles of wine, and it cost her husband, who was adjudged the keeper of the liquor, $22.07 for the condemnation proceedings. The second case was that of state against Savoini, illegal keeping, who paid $300 fine and costs. In the condemnation proceedings 35 quarts of whiskey, two quarts of wine, one quart of grappa, one jug of grappa, one quart of sour wine and six barrels of wine were condemned. The wine is worth about $55 a barrel at the present time and if the state can turn it, under the statutes, to some institution a nice sum will be realized. In Mrs. Bianchi's case 36 quarts of whiskey were found when the second raid was made. This liquor was condemned and the costs, $17.87, assessed against the woman, who paid these, with her fine. The cases of state against Mrs. Savoini, keeping; Louis Bianchi, keeping and selling; and Mrs. Bianchi, keeping, were disposed of by being not pressed. In placing the two respondents on probation, the regular provisions were made, excepting that the probation officer may visit the houses at any reasonable time of day.

An investigation is being made of the recent action taken in committing Bernie Haskins of Waterbury to the house of correction; and Mrs. Westover of Waterbury, mother of the young man, came to the city Monday afternoon, appealing to Governor Clement in behalf of the young man. It appears that the action taken, according to Mrs. Westover and the young man, was hasty and that he was not given time to show that the foundation for breach of probation was without foundation. It was claimed that he had not supported his child and that his grandmother on his wife's side complained to the state probation officer. She claimed that the child was left with its other grandmother upon her pleading for it, but that it would not stay longer in its present abode but would come to Waterbury. The wife died several weeks since of influenza. Haskins wants the child and he would have supported it if he had known anything about its needs.

As a result of the arrest and fining of R. C. O'Neill in Waterbury last week two other cases developed. It appears that O'Neill, who is employed, according to the officers, at the Central Vermont station, took money from one of the cash drawers. Before Justice Graves heard the case and was given a fine of $10 and costs, to which was attached a jail sentence. He restored the money and probation occurred as to the penalty. This brought out that he was spending his money in the pool rooms of Napoleon Deguise and Peter Barbara. They were found guilty of the offense of allowing a minor to enter their pool rooms. Deguise was fined $10 and costs and Barbara's matter is still with the court.

W. A. Pattee slipped while on his way to his home Saturday night, spraining the top of one foot so that he is unable to step on the foot.

W. H. Jeffrey, state probation officer, is attending a conference of social workers in New York City this week.

Judge F. J. Martin of the probate court has settled his quarterly account with the auditor of accounts, in which he paid to the state $1,013 as fees recovered from settlement of estates in this probate district. For the quarter ending Oct. 31, Judge Martin paid to the state $916. These two months' receipts were much larger than previous months, owing to the epidemic of influenza, which prevailed in the county in October and November.

third special examination that the board has conducted in the year.

The names of Harris Yett and D. W. Cummings, who live in ward three, have been suggested as candidates for alderman to take the place of H. C. Shurtleff, whose term expires. Ward one is looking for a man. The friends of Alderman G. P. Pitkin are trying to persuade him to run for another term but thus far he has not consented to be a candidate. Friends of G. L. Blanchard are urging him to allow the use of his name in ward four. Thus far no one excepting Frank Smith has been mentioned for ward six and he probably will not have opposition. In ward five no one has been mentioned as yet as a candidate to succeed T. M. Callahan, who says he will not be a candidate for re-election. He is filling out the term of P. H. Ryan, who died.
